All of the above articles, and a great many oth ers not enumerated, were purchased at the opening of the present Parisian season, and are consequertly a whole season in advance of the styles usually found here, as the goods imported to this country are generally ordered the preceding March, and hence are necessarily of the previous Fall's Parisian styles. Hence, to avoid the annoyance of being always behind the fashions, while making a visit to Europe, I stopped a few weeks in Paris, and bought the above goods in person, from first hands. I hope the kind patronage of the Ladies will enable me to make a yearly trip to Paris, with the sole object of keeping pace with the Parisian fashions, and to have all new styles of goods here at the same time they appear upon the Paris CWANTRIMMING. shelves. [COMMUNICATED. WINTER.

WINTER is at hand. The fields but lately smiling with beauty and painted with the variegated flowers, now bear the impress of the chilling finger of the frost king. The little songster, too, has deserted his habitation among the branches, and taken his flight to a warmer clime, where the key breath of winter is never felt, and the chill ing snow is unknown. Now and then a little warbler may be heard pouring forth one of his sweetest melodies, calling to mind the delightful season which has just passed, and then on rapid wings takes its departure to its southern home. To the restless and discontented spirit the face of nature appears sombre, and a universal gloom seems to prevail. Yet to the observing and contented spirit, the very reverse is the case. The period looked for with so much anxiety by the farmer, has at length arrived, when his barns are filled and "the horn of plenty" is overflowing with the fruits of his labor. heard far in the distance, and we are sure that neither Colt's revolvers nor Sharp's ritles could add one iota to their happiness The firesides, too, which have so long been deserted, are now resorted to, and if happi ness unalloyed can be experienced it is there. There, shut out from the tumultuous scenes of life, are nurtured those principles which mould the true character of man, and often going from thence like the bright fire which sparkles upon the domestic hearth, diffusing comfort and cheering the heart, he moves among his fellow men "a bright and shining light" bestowing happiness on society, and dies leaving his name honored and respected. Let us improve those moments, those precious moments, which are spent around the domestic hearth, and speak of its pleasures to the wayward; encourage them to contemplate the noble aspirations which the mere mention of home produce in the bosom of those who worship at its shrine; and when once we have prevailed upon them to cling to the paternal roof, we will have conferred upon them a blessing of inestimable value. And then whilst the winter winds are howling without and darkness covers the cold face of nature, the mid-night lamp will be burning brightly; and instead of being found upon our streets committing deeds of darkness, they will be lay ing up treasures of knowledge which will elevate them to that position in society which the laws of nature and of nature's God re-
